

GAIL WRONSKY

---

Beneath the Ganges Where It Is Dark

there is no edge.

No edge of petal.

No tin edge of star.

Without edges

there is no vividness.

This is what I

enjoy most about

being here.

Edges pretend that

one thing ends.

But nothing does end—

not here

beneath the Ganges

where it is dark.